

Kazakhstan surpasses Japan in global internet speed ranking

Kazakhstan Today

The Speedtest Global Index service summarized the results of December 2024 by publishing a ranking of countries and cities with the fastest internet, reports a Kazinform News Agency correspondent.

In this study, experts analyzed the average speeds of mobile internet and broadband access in nearly 200 cities across 154 countries. The primary evaluation criteria of the Speedtest Global Index are downloading and upload speeds for both mobile and broadband networks.

According to the global service data, Kazakhstan rose by one position in the country rankings for mobile internet speed. The country is now ranked 57th, with an average download speed of 53.76 Mbps. Japan follows in 58th place with an average speed of 53.54 Mbps.

However, Kazakhstan ranks lower in terms of fixed broadband internet speed, placing 88th globally with an average download speed of 73.67 Mbps.

The top three countries for mobile internet speed remain:

United Arab Emirates - 453.87 Mbps

Qatar - 383.5 Mbps

Kuwait - 257.3 Mbps

The lowest speed was recorded in Afghanistan, where the download speed was just 8.2 Mbps.

Earlier, it was reported that the percentage of Internet users has reached 93% in Kazakhstan.
